

Thanks to the journal's reviewers

The efficient and effective transfer of scientific information is well possible only if all parties involved (authors, reviewers, editors, publisher) work reliably and timely. Particularly reviewers play a major role. These unpaid experts devote much time to the manuscripts that they are asked to review, just in order to help less experienced colleagues to present their material in a better way, to guarantee the quality of the material to be published, and to guarantee timely publication.

Geologos is growing, and the review activities are consequently growing as well. We, the editors, are well aware that reviewers do their work, as a rule, in their valuable spare time. We want to express therefore our gratitude for the work that they did to help us publish the volume of which this issue is the conclusion. The reviews of the following colleagues are highly appreciated for their cooperation in 2011.
